"Here's the milk," shouted Jack. "Let's make a pancake."

But his mother said, "We need some butter."

Jack got the butter churn and held it between his knees. His mother scooped the cream from the top of the milk and put it into the butter churn. Jack pushed the churn handle up and down, up and down. Finally the cream turned into butter.

"Here's the butter," shouted Jack. "let's make a pancake." But his mother said, "we need to build a fire." Jack went to the woodshed and brought some firewood.

"Stop, stop," they shouted. "We want to eat you."

But with his little legs churning the gingerbread man only ran faster. He yelled, "I won't stop.

Run, run as fast as you can.

"You can't catch me.

I'm the gingerbread man."

And truly those children could not catch him. Once out of their sight he continued running until he had reached a pasture where two horses were grazing. He sat down on a rock near the fence.

"Don't stop," said the butterfly fluttering
